

Dean Anderson

Dean's Consulting Services

Shauntay Grant

Peter Marsman

Dean Anderson, Dean's Consulting Services

Dean Anderson is a people person. "My motto has always been, 'If I can help somebody ... my living shall not be in vain'", says the local entrepreneur.

Offering information technology (IT) and math tutoring consulting services on a part-time basis has been Anderson's prized pastime since 1982. His experience with database development and administration, web development, and a range of operating systems and applications has guided his work with a number of organizations, including the Capital District Health Authority (where he spent eight years working as a Senior Oracle Systems Analyst).

Today Anderson is a Senior Systems Analyst with Keane, an international business and IT services firm. But Anderson is probably best known around town for his successful side venture. Since 2004, Dean's Consulting Services has helped many people solve a host of computer-related problems. And the boss is always on call.

"Once a lady called me up and said she was having some problems with her computer," remembers

Anderson. "(She) wanted to know if I could help her out. I told her, 'I'm on the bus, but I'll be there in five minutes.' So I hopped off the bus, got in my vehicle at the Park & Ride, and came right over." The problem: a new Internet-user disappointed that her new e-mail address boasts her full name.

"I just smiled," says Anderson. "She's an older lady – close to her eighties – and she just preferred to use her initials."

A quick fix for an accomplished computer solutions provider, though Anderson has successfully tackled enough tough jobs that his reputation has grown even without steady advertising.

"I haven't been promoting my business – it's been spread by word of mouth, what others have been saying about me."

And what are people saying?

"(Dean Anderson) is able to troubleshoot/remedy problems effectively & efficiently" – one of the many accolades posted on Anderson's website.

"He is da man!" boasts a Lower Sackville resident.

"Your gift is priceless," raves a client from Champaign, Illinois.

Anderson says "the gift" is his open and honest manner of sharing information with others.

"I want to leave behind a legacy of blessing other people with the information I've been blessed with," says Anderson. "People need to be able to go and find the solutions for their computer issues."

As a result, Anderson has flooded his website with free technical resources and Internet downloads, as well as a range of gospel-related resources (links to daily Bible study, gospel radio, etc.)

"People need more technology," says Anderson. "They need to be spiritually fed as well. Which is why I've been making information readily available."

"I am thankful that I am able to stay competitive by the fact that my business is not my livelihood," adds Anderson. "If God has blessed me, why not use my hobby to bless other people?"

Dean's Consulting Services

Dean K. Anderson, IT
Consultant

(902) 877-1077 cell
www.deansconsulting.ca